Chad has dedicated his professional career to advancing the youth mentoring field. While in college, Chad co-founded a school-based mentoring program at a local middle school for youth with learning differences, and was a student leader and mentor in a community-based mentoring program. After college, he worked as the Program Director of The DREAM Program, a village mentoring program that matches youth from local affordable housing communities and mentors from neighboring colleges, providing year-round wraparound services. Chad joined MENTOR Vermont in 2013 as the executive director to lead the organization's expansion into a statewide mentoring partnership. Chad lives in Burlington with his wife and two young kids. Chad tries his best to emulate living life like his grandfather, who got older but never grew up. He loves taking on projects around his house, biking, basketball, spending time with friends, snacks, and checking things off to-do lists.
