

Kathi Terami graduated with a business degree from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee expecting to work in an advertising agency in a big city. Instead, she moved to a small town in Vermont where she's built a rewarding career in the nonprofit sector. As a first-generation college student, Kathi often reflects back on her teen years and is grateful for the many adults who inspired her and offered support along her career path. Now, as the Executive Director of Careers CLiC, Kathi is part of a team that has connected resources from over 1,500 employers to 25,000 students and 800 educators in 350 schools in New Hampshire and Vermont during the past 21 years - all to help the next generation prepare for life after high school.
