Liz has committed over 15 years to the youth mentoring and youth international exchange fields. She is passionate about experiential education and cultivating supportive and enriching relationships where youth have the support they need to explore and grow. Liz began her work in mentoring with the DREAM Program in Vermont, where she focused on staff training, program outcomes and strategic planning. After moving to Washington, D.C., Liz worked as a school coordinator for Everybody Wins! DC, while earning a M.A. in Ethics, Peace and Global Affairs. She finished her time in Washington, D.C. as a Program Officer with World Learning, working on U.S. Department of State sponsored exchange programs. Most recently, Liz provided project management services to a global network of international exchange providers, designing and implementing a quality certification for international exchange organizations. Liz currently oversees MENTOR Vermont's federal OJJDP grant and provides operational support to the organization. Liz is the mom of two spirited boys who keep her on her toes - skiing, constructing Legos, and building forts. Liz loves the mountains, traveling new places, state fairs, waterskiing, and hot pretzels.
